FOREWORD

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CLASS:

THE past four years, since our last report, have been most interesting to me as your secretary. Our active membership roll now stands at 796 and needless to say this period has witnessed numerous changes in the activities of many members of the class. As a body, I should say we have weathered the interval remarkably well.

In the last report I said we might splurge on this one, but again I have had to defer to economy. Once more we have had the help of David W. Bailey and the Alumni Directory staff in editing and manufacturing our book. This time the report has been simplified by the omission of data which had already appeared in previous reports and was consequently not necessary to repeat. In consideration of the importance of our tenth reunion, however, we have attempted to give the volume a more dignified appearance. I trust, therefore, that you will regard the book not only as useful for reference, but also as an addition to your library.

PHILIP H. ROBB,
Secretary.

TREASURER'S REPORT

THE following financial statements show a summary of the transactions of the Class treasury in connection with the Class's endowment insurance program, printing of the Class reports, and other miscellaneous activities.

The endowment policies which were taken out by the members of the Class to be a gift to Harvard College in 1950, yielded annual dividends beginning with the year 1929. These dividends were paid to the treasurer. The aggregate amount so received to date is $4,692,89. There were also paid to the treasurer death claims on the policies of 13 members amounting to $3,853.34.

These funds have been used principally to advance the premiums on policies of members who became delinquent in their payments to the Aetna Life Insurance Company. The cost of the Class report in 1931, which amounted to $1,086.31, was also paid out of these funds. In addition to the above, there were minor miscellaneous items of income and expense which are set out fully in the schedules shown below.

Collections were made wherever possible from members for the premiums advanced on their behalf, and where efforts to collect were not successful, the value of the policies of such members was converted to paid-up insurance. Harvard College was not given credit for the full amount of the paid-up insurance, but only for the net amount after deducting the uncollected premiums advanced by the treasurer. Of the $10,110.00 face value on December 31, 1934, of paid-up insurance acquired, $4,688.46 of the amount was credited to accounts receivable and the balance, $5,421.54, was credited to Harvard College.

As shown by the balance sheet dated December 31, 1934, there is now due Harvard, on account of death claims paid and paid-up insurance, a total of $9,274.88. There is also an obligation of $700.00 due the Iowa-Des Moines National Bank for borrowed money. These obligations are more than balanced by the claims totaling $10,110.00 which the Class will have in 1950 against the Aetna Life Company for paid-up insurance.

The Class, however, has a surplus of $3,167.92 which may be said to be represented by accounts totaling $2,992.15 due from members for insurance premiums advanced on their behalf, and a small bank balance. It is impossible at this time to determine what portion of these accounts may be collected. They have a substantial value, however, since the policies for which they were incurred may be converted into further paid-up insurance.

At the time this insurance program began, 506 members of the Class took out policies. Since that time 112 policies have been converted into paid-up insurance, and 13 contracts terminated on account of death, leaving 381 policies in force on which the premiums have been paid to date. The Aetna Life Insurance Company estimates there is $108,250.00 of insurance now in force.

THE HARVARD FUND

SINCE the Harvard Fund was established in 1926, two hundred and thirty-three men of our Class have contributed. Our record is not a good one. Last year we were third from the bottom of the list among the classes arranged in order of contributors. Only 10.3% of our Class contributed.

It should be remembered, however, that a substantial number of men are participating in our class insurance fund. We therefore have to look primarily to those who are not sharing in this obligation for gifts to the Harvard Fund, and we expect them to help us most. Such gifts, along with the class insurance fund, will be credited to our Twenty-fifth Anniversary Gift.

As time goes on, we hope that an ever increasing number of the men who are participating in the class insurance fund will also be able to give to the Harvard Fund.

Meanwhile, you will continue to get my letters each year.

HENRY T. DUNKER,
Class Agent.

IN MEMORIAM

Herbert Spencer Abel

HERBERT SPENCER ABEL was born August 1, 1903 at Bradford, Massachusetts, the son of Bernard and Anna (Kodney) Abel. His family moved to Providence, Rhode Island, when he was ten, and he was educated in the Providence public schools, graduating from Classical High School in 1920. After two years' study at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology he transferred to Harvard. Here he was active in the Glee Club and the Menorah Society and was a member of Phi Sigma Delta fraternity. After receiving his A.B. at Commencement with our class, he took up his medical studies at Cornell, taking the M.D. in 1929. During his last year at Cornell he was consul of his chapter of Phi Delta Epsilon, medical fraternity.

On April 4, 1929 Abel married Miss Adel Rubenstein, Radcliffe '26. He served his internship at the Beth Israel Hospital, Boston from July 1929 to April 1931, and thereafter served for one year as resident at the Skin and Cancer Hospital, New York City.

In April 1932 Abel returned to Providence where he established himself as a dermatologist and syphiologist. He was in active practice until his death in Providence, December 3, 1934. He was a member of the staff of Rhode Island Hospital, the Miriam Hospital, the Charles V. Chapin Hospital, all of Providence, and of the Beth Israel Hospital in Boston. He was a member of the Rhode Island Medical Society and the Providence Medical Society, treasurer of the Jacobi Medical Society, and a posthumous member in the New England Dermatological Society.

Herbert Abel was a prime companion whether there was work to be done or amusement to be found. Both as friend and as physician he was remarkable for his uncompromising adherence to the highest principles. His family, his friends, his patients, even his neighbors know that his like will be hard to find.

C. A. L.

John Henry Berry

JOHN HENRY BERRY was a native of Cambridge. He was born February 24, 1904, the son of Henry Ward and Lizzie Medora (Odde) Berry. His early schooldays were passed at Watertown. Always a high-honor student, he was graduated from the Watertown High School in 1921, the leading scholar of his class.

Berry came to Harvard as the holder of a Harvard Club of Boston Scholarship. He at once made a place for himself in undergraduate life, was a member of the Gore Hall tennis team, sang with the Freshman Glee Club, and, during the first part of his sophomore year, with the University Glee Club.

After a brief attack of acute pneumonia Berry died February 23, 1923 at his father's home in Watertown. His friends remember him as a boy of fine character and high aspirations, with a mind which gave promise of unusual brilliance.

H. W. BERRY.

Henry Morgan Bohlen

HENRY MORGAN BOHLEN was the son of Charles Bohlen of the class of 1888 and Celestine (Eustis) Bohlen. He was born December 13, 1902 at Aiken, South Carolina. He prepared for Harvard at St. Paul's School in Concord, New Hampshire. During his freshman year he was a member of the class football and hockey teams. As a sophomore he rowed on the class crew and as a junior was a member of the second University hockey team. He was a member of the Hasty Pudding Club—Institute of 1770, the S. K. Club, the Stylus Club, and the Porcellian Club.

IN MEMORIAM

Following his graduation Bohlen entered the real estate business in Boston, being associated with the office of R. DeB. Boardman and later with T. Dennie Boardman. He was married December 4, 1926 to Margaret Curtis, daughter of Edwin U. Curtis, late police commissioner of Boston. They had two children, a son and a daughter. This marriage was later dissolved. Bohlen died in Boston on Christmas Day 1934.

"Few men can have been so much loved by their friends," writes H. W., "as Henry Bohlen. But it will be part of our abiding sorrow that it should be so difficult to convey the quality of an attraction none who knew it could resist. For the desire is not easily put by to share that one has held inestimably dear. What made in him the unique, extraordinary charm? Was it perhaps complete simplicity, an utter estrangement (in his nature hatred did not flourish) from all pretence, from everything that was 'but the guinea's stamp'? That he surely had; and with it a most warm affection for all he found kindly, loyal, and therefore lovable, like himself. Surely, too, there was a fragrance in smile and speech of that South from which he drew his blood. And it is this that for many will make a snatch of Dixie, or the Camptown Race Track a spell of evocation their whole lives long. It was all these, and much more and others. But words are very vain! And better than any the writer can command are those of Francis Thompson which ring continually in his mind:

"Some may perchance with strange surprise
Have blundered into Paradise.
In vasty dusk of life abroad
They fondly thought to err from God,
Nor knew the circle that they trod;
And wandering all the night about,
Found them at morn where they set out.
Death dawned; Heaven lay in prospect wide:—
Lo! they were standing by His Side."

Jack Portman Chesney

JACK PORTMAN CHESNEY, the son of Dr. Jesse P. Chesney and Narcissa (Kennedy) Chesney, was born at St. Joseph, Missouri, February 4, 1904. After education in the public schools of Kansas City, he attended the Westport High School, graduating in 1921. He was awarded the scholarship of the Harvard Club of Kansas City, but was able to remain in Cambridge only two years before he was forced by ill health to withdraw.

After regaining his health, Chesney entered business in Kansas City, becoming active in the field of real estate loans. On February 18, 1928, he married Miss Marian Shryock. His death occurred on February 6, 1931, at St. Joseph's Hospital, Kansas City, as the result of an attack of spinal meningitis. He had been ill less than a day.

"Jack Chesney's brilliant intellectual qualities and his earnest endeavor," writes our classmate, Walter Keller, "made him a leading young business man in his community, with great promise for his future; his genial personality, kindliness, and sympathetic understanding endeared him to all who knew him; and for us who were close to him time has not tempered his sudden loss, nor will it."

James Lawrence Dunham

JAMES LAWRENCE DUNHAM was, at the time of his sudden death, May 2, 1933, instructor in physics at Harvard. His loss was a peculiarly intimate one for the University, for he had spent the major part of his academic life as one of its active contributing members, and it was only equalled in his devotion by his family and by his science. He was born March 27, 1904, in New York City, the son of Lawrence Dunham and Athelais (Cranford) Dunham, and attended the Scarsdale public schools from 1910 to 1921. He then entered Harvard, where — with a gap of two years — he spent the remaining twelve years of his life, taking the A.B. degree with his class in 1925; the A.M. in 1927; and the Ph.D. in 1929. During this period he held at different times Harvard College Fellowships and Whiting Fellowships.

As an undergraduate, as well as later, Dunham showed a great and critical interest in the theater and in public affairs. He was a member of the Dramatic Club, and of the Liberal Club, being president of the latter in his sophomore-junior year. After graduation, followed the period of his growing scientific activity. He did four years of research at Harvard, then two more at Chicago on a National Research Fellowship, whence he returned to his instructorship in 1931.

Dunham was primarily a theoretical physicist—though he began his period of research as an experimentalist, and was returning once more to active experimental work during the last two years of his life. He made substantial contributions in the field of wave mechanics, devoting himself first to the calculations of absolute intensities of spectral bands in the infra-red, and later to developing the Wentzel-Brillouin-Kramers method of solving the wave equation, which enabled him to make more precise calculations of the energy levels of a rotating vibrator than had previously been made. This was developmental work of a definitely useful kind. Of the earlier work, one can do no better than quote a scientific contemporary, who has himself made use of some of Dunham's findings: "His calculation of the absolute intensities of spectral lines is characterized by its extreme thoroughness; it was a definite advance over previous attempts, and has not been improved on since." Dunham was able to exploit his great love of the outdoors and of new countries in his other great interest in physics: cosmic rays. Here he was predominantly the experimentalist, and in the summer of 1932 had enjoyed himself to the full on a successful expedition to Alaska with Professor Bennett of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, studying latitude effects in cosmic ray intensities. And this was to be but the beginning, for he had already received a grant from the Carnegie Institute for an expedition of his own to Peru, which was to have taken place in the summer of 1933.

To three outstanding qualities of "Jim" Dunham I should like to pay tribute: his thoroughness, his modesty, and his enthusiasm. The first of these has already been referred to, and it was characteristic not only of his scientific work, but of everything he did. Patience, reliability, willingness to go to any pains to get a thing really right, these were just an inherent part of him, and he was destined, because of them, to receive ever wider recognition and responsibility. The greater the tragedy of his death (from embolism while recovering from appendicitis), that he was newly experiencing the feeling of control and assurance which the long practice of these qualities evokes.

His modesty must have struck all who met him. Even at home, he would never speak of his own contributions or of any praise they had received. I have never known a man freer from desire for self-gain. It was partly, I think, due to his gentleness of spirit, and his unwillingness to gain, however indirectly, at the expense of another. And, in part, his desire to keep his own share in the background must have been because of his appreciation of the fact that science is cumulative, and that you can never say at just what point one man's work has begun and another's has left off.

Finally, Dunham's transparent enthusiasm and optimistic, constructive outlook, utterly untouched by any hint of cynicism or defeatism, made him one of the most lovable and refreshing of men. The intense zest with which he tackled each of his manifold interests, whether skating or music or politics or architecture or camping or physics made him loved and respected everywhere. And with this enthusiasm went an active social conscience, a profound belief in the essence of democracy, and an underlying optimism in his whole social philosophy, which could never be shaken by temporary setbacks either in his own work or in the world at large. In his gentleness, his unselfishness, his complete lack of arrogance of any kind, his delightful humor, his love of hard work, and in his abounding optimism, he paid a high tribute to the University which meant so much to him. In these days the world can ill afford to lose men of his stamp.

IN MEMORIAM

Jefferson Fletcher

JEFFERSON FLETCHER was born at Cambridge on October 26, 1902, the son of Agnes Herrick and Jefferson B. Fletcher, '87. He died on July 19, 1929 at Portsmouth, New Hampshire. Fletcher's early years were largely spent in New York City. There he attended Saint Michael's School during the year 1909-1910, and Saint Bernard's School from 1911 to 1916. He prepared for college at Saint Paul's School in Concord, New Hampshire, from which he graduated cum laude in 1921.

During his four years in college Fletcher concentrated in English literature and history. Despite the handicap of a severe illness in the spring of 1925, he received his bachelor's degree. He was a member of the Signet Society, the D. U., Speakers', and Varsity Clubs, and of the Hasty Pudding Club—Institute of 1770. He won both his freshman numerals and his varsity letter in track. His first year after graduation was spent at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge University, where he studied English history. He broke the university record in the low hurdles and was the only American member of the Athenaeum Club. He was also elected to the Hawks and Achilles Clubs.

In September, 1926, Fletcher returned to Saint Paul's School as a member of the faculty. He remained there until his death. He taught English literature and history and was active as a coach in various sports.

When a successful career full of promise for the future is cut so tragically short as was Fletcher's, the man's formative years are necessarily thrown into high relief, and the close coincidence between his life and his education gives one an opportunity to see the effect of that education and to weigh its value. If an aim of schools and colleges is to send into the world clean living, clear thinking men, then in this case that aim was realized to the full. Those of us who had the privilege of knowing Fletcher at school remember a warm-hearted, exuberant boy brought up in a sympathetic and observing home. He had the qualities of mind and body which make a boy popular with his contemporaries and his elders alike. In college and afterward, we saw these qualities mature. Exuberance gave place to cheerful vitality. A furious intellectual curiosity, for which the day was far too short, developed into a keen intelligence always capable of effective concentration upon the problem at hand. Above all we saw grow to maturity that fineness of character which lay at the root of his personal popularity and which gave all his activities a rare value.

Fletcher's death deprived his family of a devoted son and brother, his friends of a loyal and charming companion, and the community of an educated gentleman.

C. F. D.

Ernest Laurence Hill

ERNEST LAURENCE HILL was born January 26, 1904, at New York City, the son of Ernest Laurence and Annette (Shaw) Hill. He prepared for Harvard at the Newton Country Day School. During his freshman year he served on the editorial board of the Red Book. As an upperclassman, his interest in the sciences was reflected in his membership in the Boylston Chemical Club. Only a few days following our graduation at Commencement, 1925, he was suddenly stricken by fever and died July 9, at Wellesley, Massachusetts.

"Ernest's energy and devotion to whatever interested him," writes his mother in a letter to the secretary, "was a special characteristic. When he was a small boy I wanted to celebrate his birthday by taking him to a matinée; instead we passed the afternoon visiting the junkshops on Atlantic Avenue. At one time he brought a forty-three-foot boat from Campobello, New Brunswick, to Cohasset Harbor in four days with only a red-headed country boy to crank the twenty-two-year-old engine, as Ernest said he did not have the vocabulary that would do the trick. He didn't hug the coast, but put straight out to sea. Just before graduating he received two first prizes from the Rudder magazine for articles sent in.

IN MEMORIAM

He was amused to be taken for a teacher at Harvard by correspondents concerning the articles.

"He was always so busy experimenting, fixing up the old boat, making radios, and so forth, that, while he liked his friends, it seemed to me that he did not know how to entertain them except by showing them what he had done, to which they were, naturally, sometimes indifferent. Just before his graduation he wrote a twenty-five-page typewritten paper called 'Reflections at Commencement — The Young Dog Answers,' in answer to an article that appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. It shows a very keen observation of doings at Harvard."

"To those who knew his early years," writes a friend of his school-boy days, William T. Reid, 3d., '26, "in the rare serenity of his home, among his friends at Country Day, and in his outside interests — ever broadening because of the joy he took in earth and sky and water — his going was an irreparable tragedy.

"His interest in mechanics and his love of the sea found expression in his first writing and also in his academic work when he entered Harvard. An integration was taking place there which would have made him an outstanding leader in his chosen field of law. For he was strong, yet in his strength imbued with sympathy; he was thoughtful and independent, yet beloved by his intimate companions; and there was in him a feeling of the wonder of the universe.

"Thus naturally 'endowed to wrestle either with the problems of nature or the complexities of his profession, it is strange that he was taken from us. The promise of his character is his imperishable monument."

George Henry Kotok

GEORGE HENRY KOTOK was born in Franklin Township, Gloucester County, New Jersey, on January 26, 1901. He was the seventh son of David and Anna (Shultz) Kotok who had migrated to the United States from Russia in 1887. As a child of seven or eight years, George already showed signs of being a keen debater and took great interest even at that early age in discussions pertaining to public affairs. When he was fourteen, he left school, and the World War then being in progress, obtained employment first in the DuPont Ammunition Factory, at Pennsgrove, New Jersey, and later at the Remington Arms Works, at Essington, Pennsylvania. From Essington he went to Boston, Massachusetts, for the purpose of enlisting in the United States Army. Being unable to enlist in Boston he went to Belmar, Texas, where at fifteen he enlisted in the United States Cavalry under the assumed name of George H. Karvel. His whereabouts during this time was unknown to the members of his family as no information was received from him.

The United States then being engaged in difficulty with Mexico, the regiment George was in was sent into Mexico under General Pershing. George engaged in several skirmishes along the Mexican border. After he had been in service about nine months he was thrown from his horse and his leg was badly injured. For three months he lay in the hospital, hovering between life and death, and his indomitable will is shown by the fact that despite his illness he never apprised the members of his family of his condition. In November, 1917, one year after his enlistment, he was honorably discharged because of his injuries and returned to his home in Vine-land, New Jersey.

After his return home George resumed his studies in the Vine-land High School. Out of forty competing schoolmates he was selected as a four-minute speaker to assist in numerous war drives during 1918. Upon graduation from High School in 1920 he entered George Washington University. His original intention was to study medicine, but he soon changed his plans and concluded to devote his time to literary work. He transferred to Harvard as a sophomore in 1922 and received his A.B. degree in February, 1925, after two and one-half years in Cambridge.

Following graduation George entered the real estate business in Brigantine Beach, a development near Atlantic City, New Jersey.

IN MEMORIAM

After a short time the wanderlust seized him, however, and he set out upon a long series of travels in quest of material for projected literary work. His method of travel was every way imaginable. He never took any funds from home. It was his habit to work for a short time at a place and then move on without any preconceived itinerary. The fall of 1925 he was thus working with a state road gang in Illinois. After a flying visit home in 1926 he spent some time in Colorado and then set out on his wanderings which took him through forty-six states before 1927. In September of the latter year he returned home somewhat exhausted, but giving no indication of ill-health. After two or three weeks the strain that he had undergone and the hardships that he had endured in his travels led to a physical breakdown. After an illness of about three weeks he died of pneumonia on October 15.

George was unostentatious. He was opposed to pomp or ceremony, regarding it as mere hypocrisy. While not of the type to make friends by flattery, he had a number of sincere intimates and was held in high regard by all who knew him. He confided in but few and his next move was seldom known by his closest friends. At his death he was sincerely mourned by all who knew him and his funeral was one of the largest ever held in Vineland.

FRANK KOTOK.

Stephen Van Praag Lee

STEPHEN VAN PRAAG LEE was born at Yonkers, New York, November 2, 1904. His father was Louis Franklin Lee; his mother's maiden name was Selma Van Praag. He attended the Horace Mann School in New York from the kindergarten through the preparatory grades and matriculated at Brown University in 1921. In the fall of 1923 he transferred to Harvard and was graduated as a regular member of our class. During his senior year he was a member of the track squad.

Late in 1925 Lee was discovered to be suffering from tuberculosis.

He moved to Colorado Springs early in 1926 and to California a year later. On April 27, 1931, he died at San Marino, California.

During his illness, Stephen Lee became interested in book collecting. His knowledge and judgment of fine and rare books made him known to book collectors and dealers throughout the United States and Europe. His enthusiasm and love for his subject was second only to his love of people. His patience, sympathy, and understanding grew even in illness. The beauty and cheer of his life could be broken only by death. All those who knew him still linger in memory. They are bound in the endless friendship created by his love. His art was to create a world, surrounding him like an aura, in which nothing ugly could exist.

E. L. '30

James Jay Mapes

JAMES JAY MAPES, the son of Victor and Anna Louise (Horke) Mapes was born October 3, 1902, at New Rochelle, New York. His father is well known as a playwright, and a great-aunt, Mary Mapes Dodge, is remembered as the author of "Hans Brinker, or the Silver Skates."

Mapes entered the class of 1925 from the Santa Barbara School. He immediately became active in college affairs, trying out for football manager at the beginning of his freshman year. While never attaining an official position in this connection, he became well known and popular with his class, and formed many of the friendships which later became so firm. He also tried out for the University hockey managership, which eventually was won by his close friend John Hooker. In his sophomore year he was elected to the Porcellian Club.

Aside from his personal talents his particular abilities lay in golf and riding, in both of which he was extremely proficient. He played on the University golf team, and surely would have excelled in this game in later life. Fox-hunting was a favorite sport of his, and often he rode with the Myopia and other hunts near Boston. We like to think of him in these accomplishments, but we also affectionately recall his mother's and father's house on Chestnut Street where his many friends were so often and cordially entertained. Few of us could forget this hospitality which Jim and Mr. and Mrs. Mapes extended to us.

In June of our graduation year he went abroad with his family. In the first week of July he arrived in Paris from London, taking the channel boat. It was cold, rainy weather, and when a few of us dined with him that night he complained of a cold. He left early, and the next day we learned he had developed pneumonia. On August 9, 1925, he died at the American Hospital in Paris. We had lost not only a very close friend but one who would have gone far in any walk of life he had chosen.

Charles Marx, Jr.

CHARLES MARX, JR. was born in New York City, April 19, 1903, the son of Charles and Mellie (Mayer) Marx. He prepared for college at the Horace Mann School. He spent his first college year at the University of Virginia. Transferring to Harvard the next year, he joined the class of 1925, in which he ranked as a superior student. He was a member of the track squad for the year 1922-23 and played in the Instrumental Clubs 1923-24. He graduated from Harvard in 1925 with an S.B. degree, cum laude.

His interest in book collecting and his love of literature, which he had developed as an undergraduate, continued. He added extensively to his library, specializing in books on printing and in rare editions. After a year in the factoring business he became associated with the Pynson Printers. He was very happy in this type of work.

His professors, friends and associates acknowledged his abilities which gave promise of a life of real achievement. After his death, February 5, 1927, resulting from a sudden attack of appendicitis, a group of friends contributed to a fund in his memory, with which have been purchased art journals now in the Fogg Museum library. These journals contain a book plate bearing his name.

It is always difficult to reconcile the loss of one who, at the threshold of life, has much to contribute. To be stricken down as was Charles Marx is a deprivation not alone to his family, but to his many friends.

Charles Coffin Mason

CHARLES COFFIN MASON was the son of Francis Payne Mason and Erma (Coffin) Mason, and was born in Chicago, Illinois, June 11, 1903. Due to the fact that his paternal grandfather was American Consul-General in Berlin and Paris, he was brought up in the French language to the age of six and crossed the ocean many times. Because of his travels his early education was somewhat disjointed, and his later schooling was further interrupted by the War. At the age of fifteen he joined the Red Cross. He saw service in France and Italy, and returned to the United States in July, 1919, with the rank of sergeant major.

After Mason's return he prepared for Harvard at the Berkshire School. While at the University he went out for Freshman football and took part in several other sports, but his chief interest was the Gun Club, of which he served as president in 1924-25. He placed third in the Intercollegiate Rifle Meet of 1924. He was also a member of K Company of the Seventh Regiment, New York City.

After graduation with his class Mason went to New York and there entered the service of the Edison Company. He remained with them until the winter of 1930 when he resigned to take a trip around the world. Upon his return he undertook fiction writing and had several stories published. He was beginning to make a name for himself when his death occurred at Hadley, Massachusetts, on August 13, 1931. He is survived by his mother, and a brother.

IN MEMORIAM

Claud Nicholls

CLAUD NICHOLLS was the oldest member of the Class of 1925 and entered Harvard after a more varied experience than most of his classmates. He was born December 25, 1889, at Grimsby, England, the son of the Reverend Sampson and Sarah Louisa (Donogue) Nicholls. He received his early schooling in Harwichport, Massachusetts, and at Arms Academy, Shelburne Falls, and Burdette Business College, Boston. From 1910 to 1917 he was employed as a bookkeeper with a firm of New England mill agents.

Four days before the United States entered the World War Nicholls enlisted in Troop A, 1st Separate Squadron Cavalry, Massachusetts National Guard. This troop, known as the "National Lancers," is the organization which for many years has served as the bodyguard of Massachusetts governors at Harvard Commencements. In August 1917, Troop A became Company A of the 102nd Machine Gun Battalion, 26th Division, American Expeditionary Force. Nicholls left for France with the reorganized battalion on September 22, 1917, and served continuously overseas until April 6, 1919. He participated in action at Chemin-des-Dames, Seicheprey, the Aisne-Marne Defensive, Aisne-Marne Offensive, Marcheville, and the Meuse-Argonne. He was once wounded — during the Aisne-Marne Offensive in Trugny Woods, near Chateau Thierry. He received his discharge April 29, 1919, at Camp Devens.

After the war, Nicholls returned for two years to Lockwood, Greene & Company, where he held the position of auditor in the traffic department. In 1921 he decided to resume his studies and, under the guidance of the Federal Board for Vocational Training, entered Harvard as a special student in arts and sciences. His work was so creditable that in the following year he was transferred to the College as a regular sophomore. Through most of his college career he was forced to divide his energies between studies and outside work, averaging during one year, at least, as much as six hours of work daily in the traffic department of Lockwood, Greene & Company. The death of his father midway through Nicholls' second year in Cambridge also brought added burdens to the younger man's shoulders. But his characteristic determination carried him through all these difficulties with credit.

After graduation with our class, Nicholls worked for a year as salesman for C. A. Vinal & Company of Boston, textile agents; then for a short time as cashier of the General Motors Truck Company of East Hartford, Connecticut. In 1927 he entered into a partnership in Boston under the firm name of Nicholls and Dixey, representing as sales agents three small textile mills. At the time of our Sexennial he reported that conditions were so quiet in the textile field that he was planning to turn his efforts elsewhere.

Nicholls died December 29, 1933, in Quincy, Massachusetts. Acquaintances report that at the time of his death he was an accountant attached to the office of the State Bank Examiner. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Muriel Louise Murray, and by four children, Adelaide Leola, Feodore Murial, Claud, and Benjamin Williams.

Jacob Vincent Nissenson

JACOB VINCENT NISSENSON's name was the first to be listed in the Class necrology. Death came to him as the result of a drowning accident on August 16, 1922, at Square Lake, St. Faustin, Quebec. He had been spending the vacation following our Freshman year in the Laurentian Mountains and, on his return trip, had decided to stop off with friends. An hour after his arrival the party went in swimming. Nissenson himself had been in the water only two or three minutes when he suddenly sank from view. It was not until the next day that his body was recovered.

Nissenson was born September 12, 1904, at Montreal, Quebec, the son of Louis and Bella (Rother) Nissenson. He entered Harvard from the Montreal High School and lived quietly during our Freshman year at a private house on Wendell Street, taking little part in Class activities. Classmates who had an opportunity to become acquainted with him during his brief time at Cambridge will recall his name with regret that a life which promised much should have been cut off so suddenly.

Dexter Selden Paine

DEXTER SELDEN PAINE was born at Brookline, June 23, 1902, the son of William Dexter and Margaret Carey Paine. He received his early education in the Brookline public schools and at the Sanford School, Redding Ridge, Connecticut, and finished his preparation at the Stone School in Boston.

At Harvard much of Paine's activities centered around the Glee Club, of which he was assistant manager from September to December, 1923, and manager from that time until June, 1925. Not a little of the success of the Club during this period was due to his devoted, energetic, and capable efforts on its behalf. While in college he was also a member of the Pierian Sodality, the Styx Club, and the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Immediately after graduation Paine joined the managerial staff of Symphony Hall, remaining there for two years. In 1927 he was appointed assistant to the cruise manager of Raymond & Whitcomb Company. In the following year he left to join the staff of the Copley-Plaza Hotel Corporation. In 1930 he entered upon preparation for a career for which he was particularly well adapted by ability and personality, that of helpful work among prisoners in penal institutions. To this end he enrolled in the Episcopal Theological School and combined his studies there with graduate work in sociology.

In June, 1931, he married Anna Hayden Dennen of Cambridge. A son, William Dexter, 2d, was born May 5, 1932.

While studying at the Theological School, Paine served as assistant to the Episcopal chaplain at the State Prison at Charlestown, at the same time carrying out duties at the prison colony at Norfolk. In September, 1932, he was appointed chaplain. His death by accident on November 3 of that same year cut short a record not only of substantial accomplishments in his chosen work but of even greater promise of achievements in the future.

John Randolph Robinson

JOHN RANDOLPH ROBINSON, the son of John Bryan and Marion (O'Neill) Robinson, was born October 14, 1904, in Paris, France. He received his early education in French, Swiss, and English schools. In 1919 he enrolled in the fifth form of St. George's School, Newport, Rhode Island and two years later entered Harvard.

Robinson became a member of the United States foreign service in 1927, and served as vice-consul in Calcutta, Madras, and Nice. In 1929 he was transferred to the consulate at Naples. On September 1, 1930, while on a visit to Capri, he was fatally injured as a result of a fall from a balcony of the Hotel Quisisana where he had moved his mattress in search of cooler air. He died the following morning.

"In college," writes J. D. L., "Robinson played leading parts in many of Le Cercle Français productions and displayed not only an amazing command of the French language but also a real talent for histrionics. There seems little doubt but that, had he wished, he could have had a successful career on the stage or on the screen, either in this country or in France. He spoke French so well that he could easily pass as a Frenchman. He was rather more mature and sophisticated than most of his classmates and combined a taste for life's amenities with a liking for good literature, good works of art, and good talk. While he knew relatively few people at Harvard, he had a wide acquaintanceship outside college circles, and his few close friends were devoted to him. They found him always a good company, imaginative, humorous, and intelligent. He had barely begun to adjust himself to life when he left it."

IN MEMORIAM

Thomas Arnold Barrett Scudder

THOMAS ARNOLD BARRETT SCUDDER was the son of John Arnold and Alice (Barrett) Scudder. He was born October 26, 1901, at Chicago, Illinois, and prepared for Harvard at the Santa Barbara School in California. Scudder remained in College two and one-half years. As an undergraduate he was a member of his Freshman track squad, and he belonged to the Iroquois, Stylus, and Fly Clubs, and to the Hasty Pudding Club — Institute of 1770.

Following graduation, Scudder traveled for some time on the Continent and in Morocco. For a time he tried his hand at painting among the mountains of the American Southwest. His principal hobby for several years was the training of dogs.

On December 27, 1930, while visiting a farm where he was boarding some of his dogs, Scudder intervened to protect his kennel-man and the latter's wife from the assaults of a lunatic. He himself was shot and fatally injured. He died on January 11, 1931, at St. Luke's Hospital in Chicago.

"All of us will remember him," writes J. H. R., 3d., "with the utmost affection. His great, rugged exterior which was in such contrast with his soft, deep, and marvelously modulated speaking voice; his passion for the unusual and his complete unawareness of conventions; his physical strength and his incomparable sense of humor made him an astounding and lovable character, whom it was a privilege to have known."

John Loftus Scully

JOHN LOFTUS SCULLY was the son of John Loftus and Mary Elizabeth (Tyson) Scully. He was born March 8, 1903, at Savannah, Georgia, and died September 3, 1924 — just before the opening of our Senior year — at New York City. During his two and one-half years in Cambridge, Scully took part in a number of extra-curricular activities, was a member of our Freshman basketball team, played on the Freshman tennis squad and later on the University basketball squad, and shared in social service work under the auspices of the Phillips Brooks House.

“John Loftus Scully,” writes Dr. Lawrence T. Cole, headmaster of Trinity School, “was a student in Trinity from 1912 to 1921, when he graduated, having been given, on the vote of the masters of the school, the McVickar Prize for general excellence during his school course, and also, by vote of the boys of the school, awarded the honor of having his name engraved on the Holden Cup as the boy who had done most for athletics during his Senior year. These awards signify the high esteem in which he was held, not only by his instructors but by his fellows as well. During the nine years he was in the school, he proved himself to be of more than ordinary intellectual capacity — honest, reliable, responsible, and loyal — a boy who could be depended upon to do the right thing in any emergency.”

Jim Chapman Sherman

JIM CHAPMAN SHERMAN was born July 12, 1904, at Augusta, Georgia, the son of Thomas Holliman and Sarah (Morris) Sherman. He received his early education at the Academy of Richmond County in Augusta, where he attained the highest honors. During his three years as an upperclassman at Harvard he held successively the Rumrill Scholarship, the Sewell Scholarship, and the Bigelow Scholarship, and was graduated with distinction.

His college years were marked also by his extra-curricular activities. He was a member of his Freshman lacrosse team and played on the University lacrosse squad the following year. He had a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

Sherman early acquired an absorbing interest in architecture. In college he specialized in Fine Arts, and he had already become an efficient mathematician. As a consequence he was especially well adapted for a post-graduate course at the Architectural School, where he received the degree of Master in Architecture in 1929.

IN MEMORIAM

After an interlude of practice in Boston, he returned to Augusta where he was associated with a leading firm of architects, Scroggs & Ewing, of which he, in time, became a member. He was considered one of the South's most promising young architects, when he died suddenly on September 7, 1934, mourned by his family, his fellow townsmen, and his classmates, to whom he had endeared himself by his qualities as a man and a friend. Sherman was unmarried. He is survived by his mother and father and two brothers, Adrian B. and Ernest L. Sherman, of Augusta.

William Denison Sleeper

WILLIAM DENISON SLEEPER, son of Henry Dike and Mary Peet Sleeper, was born January 8, 1904, in Hartford, Connecticut. His youth was passed and early schooling had in Northampton, Massachusetts, where his father was a member of the faculty of Smith College. Both his grandfathers were clergymen, and his great-grandfather was a founder of Beloit College in Wisconsin.

Preparatory to entering Harvard, Bill attended Worcester Academy, where he graduated at the head of his class in 1921. In college he concentrated in the Division of History, Government and Economics, and after graduation attended the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. He served in both business school years as an associate editor of the Business Review. At an early age and throughout his school work, Bill showed an unusual interest and exceptional proficiency in mathematics, and his principal work in the business school was in the field of statistics and finance. Upon graduation from that school he chose a position with Royal Baking Powder Company, serving first as treasurer of a subsidiary company in Detroit, and later in the office of the Company in New York City, being there advanced rapidly to a position of great responsibility.

HARVARD 1925 · FOURTH REPORT

While his scholastic interests were intense and consuming, he found both time and energy to pursue a great variety of other interests and was an exceptionally well-informed and stimulating person. He participated in athletics in Worcester and at Harvard. His vacations were spent on Lake Champlain, where he was an enthusiastic companion and leader in swimming, canoeing, mountain-climbing, and other out-of-door sports.

Bill possessed an unusually broad, human and refreshing outlook on life, had a fine and efficient mind, and was a courageous and independent thinker. He was devoted to his family and loyal to his friends, and his ideals were the highest.

After a very short illness, Bill died of pneumonia, January 20, 1930, in New York City.

Frank DeLarme Smith, Jr.

FRANK DELARME SMITH, JR., was the son of Frank DeLarme and Anna Ruth (King) Smith. He was born March 27, 1903, at Washington, District of Columbia, and died in the same city, April 13, 1933. He prepared for Harvard at the Central High School in Washington and as an undergraduate was registered in the Harvard Engineering School. During his freshman year he held the scholarship of the Harvard Club of the District of Columbia.

In college his field of specialization was mechanical engineering. Following graduation he was employed for some time with the A. C. Spark Plug Company in Flint, Michigan. He then entered the United States Patent Office as examiner, a position he retained until his death. In June, 1931, he was admitted to the bars of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia and of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. The following June he received his LL.B. degree from George Washington University. He had taken out several patents himself on electrical and mechanical devices.

IN MEMORIAM

On October 18, 1927, he had married Miss Helen B. Linkhart at Washington. His wife, as well as his parents and brothers and sisters, survived him. He left many devoted friends among his classmates and among his Kappa Sigma fraternity brothers, who will remember him for his unswerving loyalty, for his quietly expressed and well-balanced judgment, and for his extraordinary abilities in his chosen field.

F. I. S.

Peter Van Der Meulen Smith

PETER VAN DER MUELEN SMITH, son of Fred Stevens and Edith Arnold (Wills) Smith, was born at West Hartford, Connecticut on December 9, 1902. He prepared for college at Milton Academy, and was graduated from Harvard on Commencement Day, 1925, with honors in the fine arts. Following one year of graduate study at the Harvard Architectural School, he worked for a year in the office of Stone & Webster. In the autumn of 1927 he took up study in Paris with the architect Lurçat and was working with him on the development of problems of the ferro-concrete style in Continental architecture at the time of his sudden death from a heart attack, November 17, 1928.

Early in his college career Peter Smith showed marked ability as a student, and his work in the courses on Romanesque architecture was greatly esteemed by the late Professor A. Kingsley Porter. Besides his interest in the fine arts and architecture, he was an enthusiastic musician, studied the violin and especially the viola throughout his four years at Harvard and afterwards, and played much chamber music. His appreciative comprehension of the most valuable qualities in fine arts, literature, and music, particularly in current manifestations, was great. Because he possessed a rare and fearless judgment towards contemporary phases of such fields in the face of rather general hesitation, he gave promise of a contribution to the arts peculiarly vital, had he lived.

Alfred Max Stern

ALFRED MAX STERN was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, September 13, 1903, the son of Max Stern and Martha (Seasongood) Stern. He prepared for college at the University School, Cincinnati. At Harvard he was an editor of the Freshman Red Book and played with the Freshman Mandolin Club. In his studies he was especially interested in English. His hobby was book collecting.

After graduation in 1925 Stern worked for a year in the editorial department of the Cincinnati Times-Star, a position he was obliged to leave because of trouble with his eyes. He then went into the real estate business, choosing this vocation partly because of his interest in low-priced housing for the poor. He was married early in 1929 to Frances Ehrlich of Boston. He died on May 23, of the same year, at Cincinnati. His friends recall him as a man of lovely character, wise, discerning, modest, and unselfish, who had already begun to assume an important place in the community in political, religious, and charitable activities.

Russell Wilson, editor of the Cincinnati Times-Star, who was a close friend of Alfred Stern's, wrote the following editorial after his death. It expresses well the feelings of those who knew him best:

"Alfred Stern left newspaper work with poignant regret — regret which his associates as keenly shared. He not only gave rich promise of a distinguished career in journalism: in fact, within a short year he realized in part that promise. He had every attribute of a successful newspaper man. He could write with uncommon facility in style and with what is so necessary in newspaper work, celerity in execution.

"In conventional contacts Mr. Stern had the diffidence of modesty, but in his reportorial contacts he had the courage which is so necessary in a calling that takes a man where the ordinary man might fear to tread. And over all his words and acts there played a lambent humor, a quality which made him a delightful associate, both in the office and in those forays for news when coöperation becomes necessary. But his contacts with the realities of life, sometimes sordid, never caused Mr. Stern to lose sight of his ideals. When you encountered him, there usually would peer from his pocket a little volume, perhaps something in Latin, a classic reminiscent of his Harvard days. His familiarity with the finer things of literature had bred a conception of beauty that he refused to relinquish. He seemed securely possessed of the great sources of consolation and inspiration.

"His appreciation of men and ideals was without the cynicism that the years inevitably bring. Perhaps in its purity it was all too sensitive to the clashes and the shocks that are our portion of the present. Perhaps it needed the reasoning of realism and the protective induration that experience affords our sensibilities. The mind of a young man with high aspirations is terrible and wonderful. There are things in heaven and earth that are dreamed of only by youth.

"The death of Alfred Stern has all the tragedy of the rich promise of youth unrealized. The hail is followed so soon and so poignantly by the farewell. Some star 'beaconed from the abode where the eternal are.' We are grateful for the privilege of having known him. He was our comrade. He himself has carved this tribute in the tablets of our memory."

Harold Sherburne Stevens

HAROLD SHERBURNE STEVENS, son of Everett L. and Bessie R. Stevens, was born in Somerville, Massachusetts, July 20, 1903. His education was in the schools of Somerville and later of Reading, Massachusetts, where he was graduated from the Reading High School with the class of 1921. He entered Bates College, but in his second year transferred to Harvard, where he continued until January, 1924, when he left to enter the business world.

Stevens's ability as a writer was recognized in the Reading High School when he was chosen editor of the school's publication, the Pioneer. To satisfy his desire to see more of the world, he obtained employment on various steamships during vacation periods, visiting Central American countries, Cuba, Naples, Rome, Hamburg, Switzerland, and the Azores. His articles describing those travels were published in the Pioneer and a Boston newspaper.

Stevens's first business position was in the publicity department of the International Mercantile Marine Company, New York. Later he was assistant advertising manager of Becton, Dickinson Company, Rutherford, New Jersey, manufacturers of surgical instruments; then advertising manager of W. A. Baum Company, N. Y., makers of the Baumanometer; and still later managing editor of Medical Economics, Rutherford, New Jersey, a business magazine of the medical profession. This last-named position he held for seven years.

On November 2, 1923, Stevens married Miss Gertrude Lovering of Reading, Massachusetts. She died in April, 1933. On August 26 of the same year Stevens himself and his eight-year-old son met instant death in an automobile accident while driving to his parents' home.

As managing editor of Medical Economics, Stevens won the esteem of the profession in Greater New York and his reputation spread to medical centers in various sections of the country. He conducted medical surveys, contributed valuable articles to Medical Economics and to publications of the American Medical Association, and was a speaker at conventions in the West and South. Under his management Medical Economics attained the largest circulation in its history.

Edward Goodwin Wesson

EDWARD GOODWIN WESSON was born January 2, 1904, at Savannah, Georgia, the son of David and Mary Matilda (Moore) Wesson. He prepared for Harvard at the Montclair High School, Montclair, New Jersey. His principal interests in Cambridge, outside the class room, centred about debating and the Liberal Club. He debated both as a Freshman and on the University Team, served as a member of the executive committee of the Debating Union, and was for three years on the Debating Council. He was also for two years a member of the executive committee of the Liberal Club. His record as a student was a brilliant one: he received his degree with our class, magna cum laude in government. After graduation he attended the Harvard Law School, from which he received the LL.B. in 1929.

For several years Wesson lived mostly abroad, returning at intervals to an island in the St. Lawrence River. He reported to the Secretary, at the time of our Sexennial, that he had "acted as a trustee, done some research in Boston, practised English composition, and sought to improve his knowledge of other languages." He died September 29, 1932, at Norlina, North Carolina.

This old introvert has finally decided that his activities may be of interest to somebody. I'm continually told that mathematics leads one nilly-willy into astronomy if the horns of the crescent moon ever get caught in one's suspenders. Perhaps that's what happened to me. At any rate the fall of 1925 found me still haunting Cambridge as assistant in astronomy; of 1928 still there as annual instructor; of 1932 as faculty instructor and newly appointed executive secretary of the Harvard Observatory; and so to the present day. Incidentally, in 1933 I picked up somewhere a Ph.D. for something I had written concerned with the study of, so the scroll says, "Nebularum." It is also said that the study of astronomy takes the romance out of the moon and stars. T'ain't so! She put in her appearance in the fall of 1933, supposedly pursuing the study of astronomy; putting her under the spell of constellation study and telescopic observations I found that romance existed in stellar realms even for the professional astronomer. So I married her: Flora Spencer Hinckley of Newton, on March 27, 1934. There's a rumor around that we were married under Gemini. Well, perhaps so. Time will tell.

I left the Bishop Trust Company, after six years of service, in 1932 and entered the Bishop National Bank for one year. Recently I decided to concentrate on real estate in which there seems to be considerable future on these Islands. Tourist bureaus please note. Let me find you a home or a grass shack during your visit here. I had the dubious honor of placing a reunion mortar board on the fair brow of President Roosevelt during his recent trip here—at least all the Democrats say it was an honor. Though so far away I still take an interest in the affairs of the college and subscribe regularly to the Alumni Bulletin within whose pages I turn to the doings of '25 members and then promptly throw it away. I was elected vice-president of the local Harvard Club in 1932 and spent most of that year on the mainland. My duties in this capacity aren't particularly onerous. Life is very pleasant here and Tommy Nickerson and I—the only '25 men here—will continue to count Honolulu as our home for some time yet to come. My daughter, Ariana, was born in Honolulu April 25, 1933. My hobbies are skeet shooting and running a skeet club. I imagine the college is still in existence as I receive my life insurance bills regularly each year. So far they have all been paid. Aloha nui e mahalo nui loa.

of the Family Welfare Association of Scranton, Pennsylvania. A good proportion of my time, the past four years, has been devoted to the development of relief programs for care of the unemployed in Lackawanna County, Pennsylvania. This resulted in the establishment of the Emergency Relief Bureau supported by State and Federal funds. My participation in the development of a large-scale public relief program in the anthracite coal region was absorbing not only because of the problem itself, but also because it necessitated a close working relationship between labor and capital; it tied closely to the social and economic problems of the community; it permitted opportunity for study of the numerous economic and social factors lending toward community breakdown. Since August 1, I have been executive director of the Jewish Welfare Society of Philadelphia. This is a privately supported agency interested in developing family life and meeting the service and relief needs of families who cannot be cared for under the vast public relief program. It is a private program, working in coöperation with State and F.E.R.A. enterprises.

Concerning the present season I quote Olin Downes in the New York Times for December 16, 1934: "The Melrose Orchestral Association woke up Geraldine Farrar's old home town in Massachusetts last week with Hans Wiener and his dance group in an evening of ballets 'unlike anything ever seen in Melrose.' Conductor George Brown has planned for next March a symphonic night of Respighi's Fountains of Rome, Mozart's Jupiter, and a choral celebration of Bach and Handel." The report on that work should be finished by June, 1935, but who knows? Prior to that, I was one of the party that worked in Panama in 1931. In September I came to work at Phillips Academy as an archaeologist and teacher. The teaching was sprung on me when I was in the howling desert of Arizona with no means of preparing the course. Since the Sexennial Report in 1931 a good many sheepskins have passed across the table and I am getting deeper and deeper into the leather business. I am now manager of the raw stock department of Winslow Brothers & Smith Company, Norwood, Massachusetts. In November 1931 Mary and I bought our first pair of Great Pyrenees dogs from the Pyrenees Mountains of Southern France, and since that time we have imported some twelve or so more to our Basquaerie Kennels. Through our efforts the breed is now recognized in this country by the American Kennel Club. Classes are given in all shows and we have elevated four beautiful specimens to the coveted rank of American champions. This introduction and establishment of a new breed of dog in our United States has been tremendously interesting as well as a great deal of hard work. The fruits of our labors are most gratifying, however. Vacation and weekend hobby, besides dog raising and exhibiting, is camping, accompanied by four or five members of Basquaerie. I belong to the Dedham Country and Polo Club, the Trigger Club, and the Great Pyrenees Club of America.

Harrison also writing in November said: "Eddie Crowley returned to Boston last spring from a voyage to the Mediterranean in a tiny sailboat. When I last heard from him (May 1934) he had gone to New York." H. T. Mason reported in December 1934 that an account of some of the doings of J. Edward Crowley, Jr. appeared in the sporting section (page 9, column 1) of the New York Times on May 20, 1934. "The article said," wrote Mason, "that Crowley had been sailing about the world since the fall of 1932 in Ochito, a Friendship sloop which he had converted into a ketch while in Greece (his wife was with him on part of the voyage, but returned because of ill health). His temporary address was given as 342 Richmond Road, Douglaston, Long Island. Ed has written at least one article over his own name in Yachting or Rudder or a similar sailing magazine." United States Lawn Tennis Championship, and receiving honorary degrees from Yale, Princeton, Oxford and — no, no; wait a minute. This is what I was going to do in the past ten years. The trouble with these reports is that you're supposed to tell what you actually have done! Well, occasionally I sell long three-hundred word skits to the magazines. I take trips in my car to the movies in South Norwalk, and last summer I won the open tennis championship of the Westport (Connecticut) Y.M.C.A. (doubles). Thus it may be seen that I should count myself lucky in being able to do the things I like to do even though I'm not particularly successful at them. Doubtless no report at this time would be complete without a few words on the depression. Yes, it was bad for the writing business (sometimes jocularly called "game"), too. Of course a freelancer, not having a job, can't be fired from it, but editors, in bad times, can turn contributions down with even greater regularity. At any rate, they could with me, and they did. Things are better now, and I want to go on record as predicting — on second thought, I don't. There's really little to add since 1931. Since then I've done a few radio scripts, and am interested in continuing. At that time I couldn't play the piano at all, whereas now I've learned to play it badly — and get a great deal of fun out of it.

EDGAR DURBIN

Mailing Address: 227 16th St., Denver, Colo.

Occupation: Medicine.

The biggest news and the latest — Mary Durbin, born January 6, 1935. Buying cigars almost broke me. I have been sticking on the job here in Denver pretty steadily for over four years; the first two because of an association with another doctor, the last two because I have been on my own and could not afford to miss any practice. Attendance in the out-patient department of the University of Colorado Medical School and hospitals (medical, pediatric, and cardiac clinics) takes about six hours a week the year around, and the meetings of several hospital staffs and two medical clubs demand some time. I have held a commission in the Colorado National Guard for four years and a half. At first I served with the Medical Detachment, 157th Infantry. After a year I was transferred to and commanded the Medical Detachment, 117th, Cavalry. At present I am attached to the Medical Detachment, 168th Field Artillery (truck-drawn). Active duty requires two weeks in June every year. All work is not wise nor remunerative, so I relax daily — either at home or at the University Club, or both places. Inasmuch as I plan shortly to move to “bigger and better” offices and take on an added professional overhead, I believe I shall have to forego the Reunion this year. However, I am looking forward to doing some post-graduate work and seeing some football games in Boston very soon.

Since 1926 I have been a member of the faculty of English at the Choate School, in Wallingford, Connecticut. This job has left me little time for anything else, although I have managed to lead a decreasingly active literary life on the side. I have written and published a great deal too much; have been genealogically and theologically and scatologically denounced by Mr. Ezra Pound, characterized as "a cauterising blast of transatlantic hate" by an astonished critic in Cardiff, and shot at by two bandits named Joe in the State of Jalisco. I am happily not married, and not likely to be; but I sha'n't care to be more definite about this until after our Fiftieth Reunion. Reunions depress me, so I stay away from them, but I have managed to run across an astonishing number of classmates (most of them, of course, unknown to me) in curious places. I do not mean only the Harvard Club grill. The most charming of all was an encounter, on the bell-platform of the Giralda, with the man who used to sit next to me in Greek G. I have forgotten who it was, but he will remember that hot August afternoon when poor little General Sanjurjo and his army of hoodlum monárquicos were mopping up Seville with handbills and toy speeches; and I shall not forget the surréaliste effect of our discussion of the House Plan, punctuated by vivas and mueras and the breakage of plate-glass in the sunset of the streets below us . . . but this is hardly "Personal Narrative." In addition to my work at Choate, I have lectured at various schools and colleges in the neighbourhood, although I have not yet managed to crash the curious gates of Yale. One winter I gave an extension course for Trinity College; an odd affair, whose meeting-place was the Byzantine (or something) Room of the Hartford Y.W.C.A. This was pretty sordid. Less sordid, but infinitely more strange, was a series of four little allocutions that I gave in Spain before a small group of earnest Anarchico-Syndicalists, who wanted to know all about Proletarian Literature in the United States of America. They were beautifully polite, and are mostly all in prison now. . . . I have travelled a great deal during summer vacations. I am a member of the Harvard Clubs of Boston, Connecticut, and New Haven. I am a foreign delegate of the Associaciô Protectora de l'Ensenyança Valenciana, a Catalán Renaissance movement centering in València. My hobbies are those of my undergraduate days: Spain, and choral music.

BURRILL FREEDMAN

Mailing Address: 560 W. 113th St., New York, N. Y.

My personal narrative can be adequately represented only in terms of ideological development. The first step was the study, as a socially minded person, of the conflicting forces which have brought about fascism and the threat of war, and mass unemployment and misery on the largest scale in the history at the very period of the greatest productiveness in history. Next came the understanding of this contradiction as the inescapable consequence of the historically outgrown system of relations between production and distribution, namely, the private accumulation by a necessarily limited number of individuals of the overwhelming bulk of the wealth produced by the working population as a whole. The third and present stage is the social-minded participation in the breaking of this contradiction. This means actively taking sides against the reactionary forces which resist, at all costs to the living standards and cultural possibilities of the working population as a whole, the fact that their rôle on the stage of history is finished. The part which increasing numbers of Harvard men are playing in this struggle is very gratifying. I am a member of the Associated Office and Professional Emergency Employees, and of the Columbia Faculty and Workers Committee.

I can't think of much of moment that has happened to me since our last report. I was then just about starting in the insurance business — but I soon found I didn't like it. The people to whom you can sell insurance are, in my opinion, already badly over-insured as regards their capacity to pay premiums, if not as regards their need for insurance. But no one of average circumstances can afford to pay for the amount he needs — and I simply haven't the nerve necessary to try to persuade a man to take more insurance when I am firmly convinced he is already spending too much of his income on it. Selling something to those who want it is one thing, but creating the demand just in order to sell is another. So I have practically slipped back to the rare book business. Much of my time is spent on historical research for book and autograph dealers or private clients. I don't turn down insurance policies when they come my way, but I don't go looking for them. I haven't got rich, but at the end of each year I am always astonished, things being as they are, that I have managed to do so well and manage to convince myself that the ensuing year will be much worse. So far it hasn't been and I'm still surprised. It has been chiefly luck, I think. The last couple of years I have spent a month or two each year in the offices of Ely Culbertson's Bridge World, grading the scores of contestants in International Bridge Olympics. There are several other Harvard men there. You can see that I have a pretty interesting time of it—I really think I enjoy myself most of the time. I still collect cats, but the total number is kept in equilibrium by my wife who promptly sends one to an untimely death as soon as another arrives, but the Gambet cat factory, whose name is Tinker-still, produces eight each year with the utmost regularity. Oh, yes, in the autumn and winter of 1931 we took a little jaunt through Europe; France, Switzerland, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Estonia, Finland, Denmark, Sweden, and England. My monograph on the comparative roughness of the Baltic, North Sea, and Atlantic Ocean in storms is still in preparation and I can assure you it will be the result of extensive, first-hand observation. I guess that's all for five years more!

Occupation: Advertising.

When I graduated in '25, I had high hopes of entering some brokerage house or some bank and shortly dominating the financial world. One day in a brokerage house was enough for me. Later, a well-meaning friend suggested that I try advertising. I did — becoming an office boy in one of Cincinnati's smaller agencies. Six months after that, I found myself catapulted into the smallest of small agencies with a capital of two hundred and fifty dollars. It was a case of sink or swim. Since then, we have grown slowly but surely — and hope some day, soon, to go tearing around the country securing a few of the million dollar accounts which are regarded by everyone as the "plums" of advertising. As vice-president and treasurer of the Key Advertising Company, I find my life rather busy. There has been little time for reading and less time for social affairs. Married? No.

Having had a special interest in government and history and a previous practical baptism in the political arena such a decision was more a fulfillment of an ambition than a last resort. The first step I suppose in embarking on any career is to learn the game from the bottom up. In politics unless you have a knowledge and appreciation of election district and club-house campaigns your "irregularity" is sure to prove a problem. Politics while by definition being the science of government, must like other sciences be of sufficient practicability to be an applied science rather than a restricted field for research workers. Being a Republican by both birth and conviction and a resident of New York City by only the former, I found that ample opportunity could be found for political activity by anyone who was reasonably honest and had no particular axe to grind. To my mind a varying interest and experience in politics and government is an obligation and responsibility that has been evaded too long by all of us. Through my associations with the New York Young Republican Club and other organizations predicated on the same beliefs and ambitions, I have already seen the encouraging signs of young fellows engaged in various fields of endeavour who in addition to their business and social entanglements are willing to sacrifice time and effort to the shouldering of the responsibilities of good citizenship.

Since the last class report, I have continued working at the Harvard Dental School as assistant to the dean. I am often asked what my duties are in such a capacity, and I find it difficult to reply other than "assisting the dean." From the simple answering of letters to participating in faculty committee work and other broader projects, the work is constantly various, never monotonous, and just as interesting as when I commenced it about five years ago. My principal hobby outside has been the sport of figure skating. My interests have been both competitive and administrative, although as a competitor I have won no outstanding distinction. I have been treasurer of The Skating Club of Boston since 1932; I served two years (1930-32) as chairman of the competitions and rules committee of the United States Figure Skating Association, and also two years (1932-34) as the association's secretary. In the latter capacity, I took an airplane trip about Christmas time, 1933, to visit skating clubs in California, and had an opportunity to chat for a few minutes with Jim Dwight in Los Angeles. I was secretary of the 1932 Olympic Games figure skating committee, and assistant manager of the team at Lake Placid. I am chairman of the same committee for 1936, and also the sport's representative on the American Olympic Committee. On the whole, skating has been a hobby worth while playing hard, and I have derived unlimited pleasure therefrom. Although we skate only in winter, the intricacies of the sport are always an absorbing topic of conversation in summer, so we never lose touch.

I have been at the Massachusetts General Hospital, the past two years, as a research fellow in medicine from Harvard, engaged in investigation of human disease, teaching medical students, and enjoying rare crumbs of private medical practice. In 1933 I married the world's finest. My family life has included the acquisition and subsequent loss of two dogs, the last of which was a steady boarder at the Harvard Union. My outlook on life boils down to a fervent hope that someone will be so impressed with the profound significance of our investigative work that munificent financial support will be forthcoming, but fortunately for my equilibrium I do not often entertain this hope.

In May 1932, old man depression finally had me without gainful occupation. I turned to the soil; raised seedlings and early corn, and sold enough to pay for the seed and fertilizer. What profit my increased appetite didn't consume, the corn borer did. After the harvest I bought a jig-saw, which proved to be the seed which germinated into a business. The puzzle-mad public was the soil in which it was propagated. By Thanksgiving our sun porch was a veritable factory with three jig-saws going day and night, and down cellar a circular saw vied with the children to see which could screech the louder. We expanded our business to include cigarette boxes and other smoking accessories, bought more machines, moved the business into a small vacant building in Framingham, and had a home once more. We developed our gift line and

PHILIP KEENE

Mailing Address: Hotel Grafton Annex, 1735 De Sales St., N.W., Washington, D. C.

Occupation: Civil Engineering.

At the time of the Sexennial Report I was engaged in helping to build the Nassau Street subway in downtown New York. Just as that was completed, our company secured a contract for another section of subway in a less attractive district—a part of Brooklyn known as Williamsburgh. And there I learned about trunk line sewers. However, in the fall of '33 we completed this contract and the company had to let us go, as "there's no more work to do", and I took advantage of my first "vacation" in six years to cruise the Mediterranean and travel through Sicily and Italy for three months. As it was my first trip across the Atlantic I enjoyed it tremendously. Our three days in Palestine were especially successful, due largely to the kind assistance of Mr. Ali Ahmad, an Arab whom we met on our ship, the Vulcania, and who guided our party through the Holy Land and bade us goodbye after a memorable luncheon at his parents' home in Jerusalem. Leaving the cruise, I spent two happy months travelling through Sicily and Italy with Morton Wallace, California, '25 (ca.). Mort, the lucky devil, is still over there and enjoying life in Austria and Italy to the utmost. He was an ideal companion—knew all the ropes and the places of interest and was indefatigable. I learned a good deal more Italian than the traditional two words—"quanto" (how much) and

HARVARD 1925 · FOURTH REPORT

“troppo” (too much). I hope to get back to Italy on my next trip (God willing) and also to see Spain before it becomes too modernized. And next time I hope not to land in New York with only 81 cents, just enough for a taxi to the Harvard club. After returning I went to work for the inspection division of the P.W.A., Interior Building, Washington. Our organization is first class and the work, partly because of its “pioneer” nature, is intensive and (we think) important, and also not devoid of humor and excitement. Washington is a particularly interesting place to be in these days, and I find that it is a far more liveable city than New York.

From the Sexennial Report I learn that when last heard from I was starting work on Radio City with the prospect of a five-year job. At the end of three I found myself on the street in front of the last of the skyscrapers with a profound knowledge of how to put one together, but with small chance of applying it. However, since I had taken several thousand photographs and as many feet of film during its construction, I set out to preach what I had practised, changing my comment, and at times the film, to meet the exigencies of the given situation. My weak knees were cured in the New Jersey flats in a lecture preceded by three hymns and the Lord's Prayer. The high point of the lectures came when I read the account of the "Vortrag" by "Professor Kilham" in the Allgemeine Zeitung in Berlin. My European excursion came to an abrupt end with the monetary experiments of Mr. Roosevelt and I returned to the land of opportunity. Low-cost housing was at that time of primary interest. I was given the job of investigating the subject and preparing a scheme for a six-block development in New York City. Like most of the others, nothing has come of it, but it gave me the chance to get on the way once more and I have been going day and night ever since. in general, if not in particular, by letting the trowel slip as I pass beneath their scaffold. It's a good sign. Starting as a one-man office, I have moved six times in this period, ever upwards, till now I find myself in charge of the branch office of Corbett, Harrison & MacMurray on the fifty-second floor of the R.C.A. building. It's sort of a come-down, though, to ride in an elevator after all the ladders I climbed in the good old days. January 1 finds me with two or three small jobs of my own as well as the office work and if, from all reports, there is no hope for the future, at least for the present I am too busy to worry much about it.

In 1930-31 I was in Boston and Cambridge tutoring and writing. I was married, January 22, 1931, in Boston, to Katharine Prideaux Foster of London. In the following year, I was at Palma-de-Mallorca and London, still writing (the oatmeal was of excellent quality). The year 1932-33 was spent in Lynn printing and writing (oatmeal thin). I was in Mexico in 1933-34, writing (tortillas are worse). Back to Lynn in 1934, still writing (no oatmeal whatsoever). Since the last report, I have had the following works published: Cinderella Married: a Divertissement, New York, A. & C. Boni, 1932; No Apology for Poetrie, and other poems 1922-1931, Boston, Bruce Humphries, 1934. By the time this report is published, there will probably be added Barclay Street: the Portrait of a Bourgeois Neighborhood. The record, I imagine, needs no comment. It wouldn't be a bad life if one could eat.

December 12, 1933, I was married, in New York City, to Evelyn Henry Stoppani, daughter of Mrs. Rudolph Isler of Wohlen, Switzerland, and San Francisco, California. When the Sexennial report was being published, I had left the New York Central Railway and was jobless. After an indecent interval of job-seeking, I landed in a reporter's berth on The Daily Press of White Plains, New York. The paper folded up after I had been on the staff two years. In the lean and leery fall of 1932 I learned that some incorrigibly hardy souls were raising money to start a better newsmagazine. (Fancy raising money in 1932!) Amid sceptical laughter and cynical jeers I helped launch the venture. When the first issue slid out on to the turbulent publishing sea in February, 1933, I was aboard with a cabin-boy's rating. Four weeks later every bank in the country closed. But News-Week sailed on; and through all the storms and droughts of the last twenty-one months it has forged ahead and won prestige for its designers and crew. I've raised my rating to managing editor. I shan't apologize for blowing the magazine's horn because that's the best way I have of blowing my own and producing a personal narrative.

In attempting an autobiography of the long period of time that has elapsed since the Sexennial Report, I find myself drifting away from the sources of truth and fact. My hand constantly strays toward the brush with the pink paint. What changes have taken place in my young life are really not worthy of too much note. I still have my ambitions. I still read the Transcript, the Saturday Evening Post, and the book reviews in the New York Times. Much of my spare time is spent in hoping fervently for the return of the Republican administration in 1937. Politics interest me more and more each day. My reactions to the recent upheavals convince me that the song should have been titled, "Harpy Days Are Here Again." Since leaving the lecture room of the Yard in 1925 I have remained in Cambridge as a citizen in good standing. I have lived within stone-throwing

The State of Illinois granted me a certified public accountant's certificate in 1932, which lends a bit of gloss to my professional activities, but can't be used as collateral, even for lunch money. The last four years have seen me doing much the same things I was doing at the last reporting, including a substantial amount of traveling over the eastern half of the country. I don't stay long enough in one place to acquire even a wife. Our predecessors in the College and particularly in the Law School, who have found their way to Washington, have provided a host of inquisitors whose insatiable demands for information have kept me working well into many a night. Perhaps I should be grateful to them for improving at least one profession besides that of the counsellor-at-law.

My ambition seems to be the production of a maximum number of mouths to feed, for since the last report two boys have made their appearance: James Jr., was born July 8, 1931, and Elliott Norris, February 15, 1935. I am still in the property management game with Willoughby & Company, which has at least stalled off starvation so far. I still follow the fire department on every run, day or night, which does not materially help my domestic relations. Since 1931 I have continued at St. Lawrence as an instructor in government. College teaching, as those in the business know only too well, soon becomes a routine, and one has to invent ways to re-invigorate one's thinking. To that end, I continued my research on my doctor's thesis and completed it in the spring of 1934. The subject was: "The United States and Multipartite Administrative Treaties." Last June I got the long hoped for Ph.D. The summer of 1933, I spent at an institute on International Law held at the University of Michigan. This coming summer I hope to go abroad, visiting chiefly England. In the meantime, I hope to continue writing short articles for the professional journals. I was closer to marriage the year we graduated than I fancy I am now. I am quite fatalistic on the subject, however, and I have no doubt that one of these days I will be exchanging one set of disadvantages for another set. With my eight-pound thesis brain-child out of the way, I suppose I may look forward to a nine-pound baby some day — c'est la vie.

Reunion finds me without wife,
The prospect, poor, but hope is rife.
The Decade's been a fearful strife.
(What more should one expect from life?)

Some honest folk might point with pride
To what is going on outside.
But I, for one, don't like a "ride"
That causes pain I have to hide.

What Destiny has shaped our ends
To give us liquors that are blends;
To try our patience and our friends
With Brain-Trust nonsense that offends?

To "water" stock's a baneful sham,
If you have doubt, see what I am.
But no one seems to give a damn
How "watered" is our Uncle Sam.

Just picture (if you dare or can)
Our country with the "Townsend Plan."
No work, all play for maid and man.
Imagine that, my Peter Pan.

We may not have much peace on earth,
We may be paid less than we're worth,
But those who don't indulge in mirth
Might just as well forget their birth.

So all that I have learned as yet
Is that it doesn't pay to fret,
The curtain's drawn, the stage is set
For ten years more of fun, I bet.

I moved to St. Louis as district manager of the same company, covering the entire Middle West from Memphis to Oklahoma and Nebraska. I am pleased to say my guess was right, for undoubtedly the A.A.A. and other government agencies have, indirectly, been of great help to me in getting correct time in thousands of homes where a few years ago there was no interest whatsoever in what time of day it was. Needless to say a Missouri Mule is more than a song to me now. In August, 1932, when returning from Bill Ripley's wedding in Holland, I spent a very pleasant few days with Joe Greeley in London. I was married to Margaret Cowles Esty, December 27, 1933, at Framingham Centre. I am a member of the Harvard Club of St. Louis.

I have also been working in collaboration with a former Rockefeller fellow on a new theory of business cycles, with the aid of which every major depression in this country since 1880 could have been predicted about four years in advance. A condensed statement of some aspects of the theory (omitting the forecast) appeared in the Quarterly Journal of Economics for November, 1934, and seemed to evoke considerable general interest, if requests for reprints and forecasts is a criterion. We are now working on a book which will consider, in detail, the theory's practical possibilities.

Last April I became cotton buyer for Bemis Brothers Bag Company and I am now located in their Boston office. There are occasional trips to their cotton mills and to the cotton growing states. The avocation of shooting with many of its ramifications — game bird breeding and conservation, bird dogs (primarily setters), and field trials (at which I occasionally officiate) mixed with some farming whet a good appetite, retard the bay window, and occupy the balance of my sixteen-to seventeen-hour day despite the N.R.A., processing taxes, and corn-hog program.

My story is from one who, like many others from our Class, got involved not only with Lady Luck, but also with the elusive Mistress of the Law. It is no joke when you get coupled up with both of these Girls. Youth's ambition and optimism prompted me to resign from the legal staff of the United States Rubber Company and go into private practice. This happened in 1930, and then started a tough battle. For three years my only fee was experience, and one can't live on that! I did one smart thing, however. On April 17, 1932, I became a father to a golden-haired, blue-eyed girl called Judith Anne. Apparently Lady Luck and Mistress Law admired my spunk in increasing the population and gave me a helpful hand. In 1933 I became associated with Morris L. Ernst, Esquire, general counsel to the superintendent of insurance for the State of New York. We tried to clear the guaranteed mortgage certificate "mess." A sincere and faithful job, but we were not always appreciated. We all quit and I went down to work for President Roosevelt as Legal Adviser to the chemical, paint and drug codes of the N.R.A. in Washington. It was great experience and fun. On January 1, 1935, I resigned from N.R.A. and I am now back in New York a wiser man with a firmer grip on the hands of both Ladies.

There is a half-back in the making—the kind I haven't seen at Harvard for a long time—and I don't think I've missed a Harvard football game for 14 years. Right now he looks like the kind that comes up after getting a hard bang in scrimmage, spits out a mouthful of blood, and just says, "Gimme that goddam ball." From what I've seen that have been called football players at Harvard of late, he's going to be a surprise.

Since being admitted to the Foreign Service my life has been one of work, study, travel, and sports in various countries. I was appointed American vice-consul at La Guaira and Caracas, Venezuela, served as secretary of legation at Bogota, Colombia, and Oslo, Norway, and was assigned to Washington and Panama. At present I am with the American consulate general in Shanghai, China. I was married to Cleome Carroll at my home in Middletown, Connecticut, on October 20, 1934. During the trip back to the States I amused myself on the two-week train trip across Manchuria and Siberia by cooking my own food on an alcohol stove and by trying to talk to the natives (there were no English speaking persons on board). Learning languages is my hobby, but I find that every time I learn a new one I seem to forget a previous one. The Service, besides giving an opportunity of serving one's country, offers the chance of being able to improve one's education and outlook on life. Being married to an artist gives a still greater interest to one's observations and is the greatest insurance against boredom.

T. Barnum's advice — "Never give a sucker an even break." Following the close of Chicago's fair, I turned my back on the world of barkers, shills, and fan dancers with the conviction that it's a tough way to make a living. For four years I had spent most of my time working to bring about the birth of government participation in low cost housing and slum clearance. Since April, 1934, I have been with the Housing Division of the Public Works Administration as a Regional Coördinator initiating Housing projects in the South and New England. This is more satisfying and (a New Dealer would say) more constructive work than wheeling dimes from the forgotten men.

After approximately a month's work at Paris and another at Munich, I settled down for the winter at Rome. In the spring my interest in the classics permitted travel in Sicily and Greece and a flying visit to Crete, Egypt, and Palestine. The return trip took me back through Germany to Holland and England. I hardly need add that particularly in these tense times one of the most interesting and instructive phases of the year's experience was the study of the lives and the attitudes of the common people in the different lands.

In 1931 and 1932 I took a breather from business and spent ten months going around the world. I was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Scott McLeod at their sheep station, Terrica, in the heart of the sheep country of Queensland, Australia. Mr. McLeod has about 52,000 acres of improved land and about 45,000 sheep. His wool clip is enormous. I flew from Brisbane to Sydney in a rather worn-out Fokker, and spent Christmas of '31 with some friends there. After leaving Sydney, the next stop was India: Colombo, Madras, Calcutta and then off to the Northwest Frontier Province where I was entertained by the First-Eleventh Sikh Regiment as a guest of Lieutenant George Merritt. From there, I went to Delhi, Agra, and Bombay, and back through Europe. On May 19, 1934, I was married to Miss Marion Sherwood Kelley of Toronto, Ontario. If we can get past the wolf at the door we are planning another trip around the world. I highly recommend it to any of you who have not tried it.

After four years of hospital work at the Massachusetts General, Boston Lying-in, and Free Hospital for Women, I at last can claim a home which has the prospect of permanency as well as contentment. Now, practically on the eve of our tenth reunion, I am getting launched in general practice with my chief interests in gynecology and obstetrics. I am on the staffs of the Waltham and Framingham Hospitals, and the Florence Crittendon Home. I was married, November 8, 1930, to Annette N. Wright of Gwynned, Pennsylvania. We have two sons: Benjamin Smith, Jr., born March 30, 1932, and Thomas Rodman, born March 8, 1934.

Our class launched forth in 1925 upon a calm and generous sea, but soon we were overtaken by the Social Revolution and found ourselves in the gigantic whirlpool of the economic depression. High "bear" waves and deep dark "bull" gullies have become a routine part of our voyage through life, but by now those of us who had faith in our country, and an iron nerve, plus a willingness to work and subject ourselves to the new tide, have no doubt weathered the turmoil. At our Sexennial we sang "Bye Bye Blackbird", which I presume was a farewell to prosperity, but I now challenge my classmates of ten years standing to come along with me to the reunion in June of 1935 singing "Not much money, oh, but honey, ain't we got fun." I have a growing law practice both general and before the United States Government departments; own my home except taxes; and I have a good wife and three fine boys. (Judson Rawlings arrived May 30, 1934.) I have published "The Wood Family in America — 1634-1934" and "Malta, Its Historical and International Aspects." I am a master Mason, a member of the Mayflower Descendants, the Harvard Club of Washington, the Bar Association of the District of Columbia, the Bar of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, the United States Court of Claims, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

Mailing Address: College Manor, East Lansing, Mich.

Occupation: Mercantile Business.

Since a third alarm questionnaire grills me, I'm at last forced to confess that in this tenth year of my wide roving my manly resistance crumbled before a beautiful and clever charmer, yclept Bona Brunn of Forest Hills, Long Island. But I avenged this ignominy by taking away her name (September 13, 1934) and bearing off her person to this outpost of civilization to tend my fire. The advance to Michigan was the result of my vision in anticipating the debacle of the organization with which I was connected—while the same prophetic streak failed to protect my own imperilled investments on the Street. Now I'm a district manager, a kind of country doctor who runs about with a Ford and satchel, patching up sick little shoe stores with a cum laude in German.
